

This is just another example of big business trying to ruin innovation. XM is an amazing service, and provides quality content to its subscribers. If I was the NAB, I would be worried about XM too. But lobbying for regulation is not the answer! We will in a capitalist country, competition is the key to our economy. XM charges money, some people have decided that they would rather pay money, then listen to the banter of commercials on regular radio. the NAB needs to learn to compete or go the way of the dinosaur. Do the right thing, allow XM to flourish!
